

MvM TECHNOLOGIES

Employee Handbook

People. Performance. Progress.

WELCOME TO MvM TECHNOLOGIES

This handbook introduces the workplace principles, policies, expectations, and resources that help us build a safe, respectful, productive, and inclusive organization.

Version 1.0 | Effective September 2026

Company policy documents and employment contracts may provide more specific terms. Where there is a conflict, applicable law and the controlling company policy or agreement will govern.

1. Welcome to MvM Technologies

Our workplace is built on trust, accountability, collaboration, and continuous improvement.

Welcome to MvM Technologies. Every employee contributes to the quality of our work and the experience of our customers, partners, and colleagues. This handbook is a practical guide to the standards we expect and the support employees can access.

How to use this handbook

- Read the handbook during onboarding and revisit it when you have questions about workplace practices.
- Use your manager or HR contact when a situation is not covered or requires confidential guidance.
- Follow current company policies, procedures, and legal requirements in addition to the principles described here.
- Ask early when you are unsure. Seeking clarification is a sign of responsibility, not weakness.

Our commitment

MvM Technologies aims to provide a professional environment where people can do their best work, receive fair treatment, develop their skills, and raise concerns without fear of retaliation.

A handbook is a guide, not an employment contract. Company policies may be updated as the organization, technology, and legal requirements evolve. Employees are expected to follow the latest approved policy versions communicated by the company.

2. Handbook at a Glance

The 16-page handbook is organized around the employee journey and everyday workplace decisions.

Key principle

When policies do not give a direct answer, use sound judgment: protect people, protect confidential information, communicate clearly, document important decisions, and ask HR or your manager for guidance when needed.

3. Our Culture & Values

The standards below describe how we work together, regardless of role or seniority.

Integrity

Be honest, accurate, and transparent. Do not knowingly misrepresent work, data, status, or results.

Ownership

Take responsibility for commitments, communicate risks early, and follow through on agreed actions.

Respect

Treat colleagues, customers, vendors, and visitors with professionalism and dignity.

Customer Focus

Understand the real need, build reliable solutions, and create lasting value.

Learning

Share knowledge, learn from mistakes, and continuously improve skills and processes.

Collaboration

Work across teams, give credit fairly, and resolve disagreements constructively.

Everyday culture

- Use evidence and facts when making decisions.
- Invite different viewpoints before closing important decisions.
- Give feedback about work, not personal characteristics.
- Recognize good work and share lessons that can help the wider team.

Leaders have an added responsibility to model these values, address concerns promptly, communicate expectations clearly, and avoid favoritism or retaliation.

4. Employment Basics

General guidance for onboarding, roles, documentation, and employee responsibilities.

Employment status and records

Employment terms are governed by the appointment letter, applicable law, and current company policies. Employees should keep personal contact, emergency contact, bank, tax, and identification information accurate in the systems designated by HR.

Joining and onboarding

- Complete required forms, identity checks, policy acknowledgments, and role-specific training.
- Protect issued assets and credentials from the first day of employment.
- Ask your manager about priorities, deliverables, communication channels, and escalation paths.
- Complete mandatory compliance or security training within the required time period.

Probation / confirmation

Where applicable, probation and confirmation terms are stated in the appointment letter or HR communication. Confirmation is based on role expectations, performance, conduct, and successful completion of applicable requirements.

Employee responsibilities

- Maintain professional conduct and accurate work records.
- Follow approved processes for finance, security, procurement, customer commitments, and access control.
- Report errors promptly rather than hiding, deleting, or altering information to avoid accountability.
- Use company time and resources responsibly.

Important

This handbook does not replace the employee appointment letter, benefit plan documents, local legal requirements, or written policy notices issued by MvM Technologies.

5. Working Hours, Attendance & Leave

Reliable attendance and clear communication help teams plan work fairly.

Working hours

Employees are expected to follow the working schedule communicated for their role, team, location, or shift. Managers may establish reasonable schedules to meet business needs, subject to applicable law and company policy.

Attendance and punctuality

- Be ready to work at the agreed start time and attend required meetings or shifts.
- Inform your manager as early as reasonably possible when you will be late or absent.
- Do not ask colleagues to mark attendance or approve time on your behalf.
- Record time, overtime, or shift details accurately where such systems are used.

Leave requests

Planned leave should be requested through the approved HR or leave-management process. Approval depends on available leave, operational needs, and applicable policy. Emergency or unexpected absence should be communicated promptly.

Leave categories may include

- Annual / earned leave
- Sick leave
- Casual or personal leave
- Public / declared holidays
- Parental or family-related leave where applicable
- Other statutory or company-approved leave

Managers should balance business continuity with reasonable employee needs and apply leave rules consistently across the team. Unused leave, carry-forward, and encashment rules, where applicable, are governed by the current leave policy.

6. Performance & Career Development

We believe expectations should be clear, feedback should be timely, and growth should be intentional.

Goal setting

Employees and managers should agree on measurable priorities, role responsibilities, and expected outcomes. Goals may include delivery, quality, customer impact, collaboration, operational improvement, and learning.

Performance conversations

- Discuss progress regularly rather than waiting for a formal review.
- Use specific examples when giving or receiving feedback.
- Document meaningful development actions and agreed support.
- Raise blockers early so the manager can remove obstacles or reprioritize work.

Development

- Identify one or more skills to strengthen each review cycle.
- Use internal knowledge sharing, mentoring, training, project assignments, and self-learning where relevant.
- Apply new skills to real work and share practical learnings with the team.

Performance concerns

Where performance or conduct does not meet expectations, the company may provide coaching, a documented improvement plan, additional training, or other corrective action consistent with policy and applicable law.

Career growth

Career progression considers demonstrated capability, sustained performance, role requirements, business needs, leadership behaviors, and readiness for expanded responsibility. Promotions are not automatic based solely on tenure.

7. Compensation, Benefits & Expenses

Pay and benefits are administered through approved company processes and applicable plan documents.

Compensation

Salary, incentives, variable pay, and other compensation components are governed by the employee's written employment terms and applicable compensation policies. Employees should direct payroll questions to HR or the designated payroll contact.

Benefits

Benefits may include statutory coverage, insurance, retirement-related programs, wellness initiatives, and other company-sponsored benefits depending on eligibility and plan terms. Benefit summaries do not override the official plan documents.

Business expenses

- Obtain required approval before making non-routine business expenses.
- Use reasonable and business-appropriate spending.
- Submit receipts and supporting documents accurately and on time.
- Never split expenses or change descriptions to bypass an approval limit.
- Personal purchases are not reimbursable unless explicitly approved under policy.

Travel

Business travel must follow the current travel and expense policy, including approval, booking channels, reasonable accommodation standards, local transport, and required documentation.

Good practice

Treat company money as carefully as your own: spend only for a legitimate business purpose, choose reasonable options, keep evidence, and disclose unusual situations.

8. Professional Conduct & Workplace Respect

A healthy workplace depends on behavior that is professional, safe, and considerate.

Expected conduct

- Communicate respectfully, even during disagreements or high-pressure situations.
- Avoid abusive, threatening, humiliating, discriminatory, or intentionally disruptive behavior.
- Be truthful in reports, records, timesheets, expense claims, and business communications.
- Follow lawful and reasonable instructions relevant to your role.
- Use company property and systems responsibly.

Conflicts of interest

Employees should disclose situations where personal interests could influence, or appear to influence, company decisions. Examples may include outside work that conflicts with company duties, significant interests in a supplier or customer, or participation in decisions involving close personal relationships.

Gifts and hospitality

Do not offer or accept gifts, favors, entertainment, or benefits that could improperly influence a business decision. Follow applicable approval and value limits where a gifts or anti-bribery policy exists.

Alcohol, drugs and impairment

Employees must be fit for work and must not work while impaired by alcohol, illegal drugs, or other substances that compromise safety or performance. Medication that could affect safe working should be handled responsibly and confidentially.

Company representation

Only authorized employees may make public statements or commitments on behalf of MvM Technologies. Media, investor, legal, or public requests should be directed to the designated company representative.

9. Equal Opportunity & Anti-Harassment

MvM Technologies supports a workplace where employment decisions are based on merit, role requirements, performance, and legitimate business needs.

Equal opportunity

The company seeks to prevent unfair discrimination in recruitment, assignment, development, compensation, promotion, and separation. Employment decisions should be based on lawful, job-related criteria.

Harassment is not acceptable

Harassment can include unwelcome verbal, non-verbal, visual, physical, digital, or other conduct that creates an intimidating, hostile, humiliating, or offensive environment. A concern should be raised even if the employee is unsure how the conduct should be classified.

Examples of unacceptable behavior

- Unwanted sexual comments, advances, messages, or images.
- Slurs, insults, humiliating jokes, or repeated personal attacks.
- Threats, intimidation, stalking, or deliberate exclusion intended to harm.
- Sharing offensive material through company systems or work-related groups.
- Retaliation against a person who raises a concern or participates in a review.

Reporting and confidentiality

Employees may report concerns to their manager, HR, designated grievance channel, or other approved escalation route. Reports will be handled as discreetly as reasonably possible, while allowing the company to review facts and take appropriate action.

Zero tolerance for retaliation

No employee should face punishment, threats, exclusion, or other adverse treatment for raising a good-faith concern or participating honestly in an investigation.

10. Information Security & Acceptable Use

Protecting information is everyone's responsibility.

Account security

- Use unique passwords and approved authentication methods.
- Never share passwords, MFA codes, API keys, or access tokens.
- Lock your device when stepping away.
- Report suspected credential compromise immediately.

Devices and software

- Use company-approved or authorized software for business work.
- Do not install unapproved tools, extensions, or executables that create security risk.
- Keep operating systems and security updates current where you are responsible for them.
- Connect to corporate resources only through approved secure channels.

Email, messaging and internet

- Treat unexpected links, attachments, login requests, and urgent payment requests as suspicious until verified.
- Do not forward confidential company material to personal accounts for convenience.
- Use respectful language in workplace chats and collaboration tools.
- Do not use company systems to create, store, or distribute unlawful or abusive content.

Incident reporting

Report phishing, malware, lost devices, accidental disclosures, suspicious access, data exposure, or other security incidents immediately through the approved IT/security channel. Fast reporting can reduce impact.

AI and external tools

Do not paste confidential, personal, customer, source-code, credential, or restricted information into public AI tools or third-party services unless the tool and use case are explicitly approved by the company.

11. Confidentiality, Privacy & Records

Employees must handle sensitive information with care throughout its lifecycle.

Confidential information may include

- Customer and prospect information
- Employee and HR records
- Source code, credentials, architecture, and technical designs
- Pricing, contracts, financial information, and business plans
- Internal strategy, reports, research, and product roadmaps

Need-to-know principle

Access information only when it is necessary for your role. Do not browse, copy, download, photograph, or share information simply because the system allows access.

Personal information

Personal data should be collected, used, stored, and shared only for legitimate business purposes and in accordance with applicable privacy requirements and company procedures. Employees should minimize unnecessary copying and retain information only as required.

Records and retention

Business records should be accurate, traceable, and stored in approved locations. Do not destroy, alter, or conceal records that are subject to an investigation, audit, dispute, legal hold, or retention requirement.

After employment

Confidentiality obligations may continue after employment ends. Company devices, documents, credentials, access cards, and other property must be returned as instructed, and copies of restricted information must not be retained.

12. Remote Work & Flexible Collaboration

Flexible work requires stronger communication, security, and ownership.

Working remotely

Where remote or hybrid work is permitted, employees must maintain a suitable work environment, meet agreed availability expectations, protect company information, and deliver work to the same professional standard expected onsite.

Remote-work expectations

- Be reachable during agreed working hours unless on leave or otherwise unavailable.
- Keep calendars and status indicators reasonably accurate.
- Attend required meetings prepared and on time.
- Use secure networks and approved devices.
- Avoid discussing confidential matters where unauthorized people can overhear.

Meetings and collaboration

- Share agendas or expected outcomes for important meetings.
- Use concise, respectful communication in chat and email.
- Document important decisions, owners, and due dates.
- Do not assume silence means agreement; confirm critical decisions in writing.

Home office and equipment

Employees are responsible for reasonable care of issued equipment and should report damage, loss, or connectivity problems promptly. Company policies may specify eligible equipment, reimbursement, or security controls for remote work.

Work-life boundaries

Managers should plan work realistically and respect agreed working hours. Employees should communicate capacity risks early rather than silently accumulating unsustainable workloads.

13. Health, Safety & Well-being

Safety is a shared responsibility in offices, customer locations, travel, and remote work.

Safety responsibilities

- Follow workplace safety instructions and emergency procedures.
- Report hazards, injuries, unsafe behavior, or serious near-misses promptly.
- Use required protective equipment in designated environments.
- Keep workspaces reasonably clean and free from avoidable hazards.

Emergency response

In an emergency, prioritize personal safety and follow building, local authority, or emergency-service instructions. Employees should know the emergency exits and basic reporting route for their work location.

Well-being

The company encourages healthy working practices, respectful workloads, breaks, and early communication when work conditions are affecting performance or well-being. Available wellness or support resources should be used according to the current benefits or HR program.

Travel and field safety

When traveling or working at customer or partner sites, comply with site rules and reasonable safety instructions. Avoid unsafe travel or work conditions and escalate concerns before proceeding.

Incident documentation

Where an incident occurs, provide accurate information and cooperate with reasonable reporting or review processes. Do not speculate publicly about an incident before facts are established.

Remember

No deadline is more important than immediate personal safety. Stop and escalate when a situation presents a serious and avoidable risk.

14. Grievances, Whistleblowing & Escalation

Speaking up helps the organization identify problems and improve.

When to raise a concern

- Harassment, discrimination, bullying, threats, or retaliation.
- Fraud, bribery, theft, falsification, or misuse of company assets.
- Serious information-security or privacy incidents.
- Safety concerns or repeated unsafe practices.
- Material conflicts of interest or unethical business practices.

How to raise a concern

Start with your manager or HR where appropriate. For sensitive matters, use the designated confidential or whistleblowing channel if available. Reports should be made honestly and with as much specific information as reasonably possible: what happened, when, where, who was involved, and what evidence may exist.

Review process

The company may review concerns through interviews, document checks, system records, or other appropriate methods. Employees are expected to cooperate honestly and keep the matter confidential to the extent reasonably possible.

Good-faith reporting

Employees should not be penalized for making a genuine report, even when the concern is not ultimately substantiated. Knowingly false or malicious allegations may themselves be treated as misconduct.

Escalation

If a concern is not addressed appropriately, employees may use the next approved escalation route identified by HR or company policy. Urgent threats to safety should be escalated immediately to emergency services or the responsible site authority as appropriate.

15. Separation & Employee Acknowledgment

A respectful exit protects both the employee and the organization.

Resignation and notice

Employees who resign should follow the notice period and resignation procedure stated in their appointment letter and current company policy. The company may communicate transition expectations, handover timelines, and final-date confirmation.

Handover

- Document active work, pending decisions, key contacts, and important deadlines.
- Transfer approved files, credentials, and ownership through official channels.
- Return company property and access credentials as instructed.
- Complete required clearance, finance, HR, and administrative steps.

Final settlement and records

Final salary, eligible reimbursements, leave treatment, benefit changes, and required documents are processed according to applicable law, employment terms, and company procedures.

Employee acknowledgment

I acknowledge that I have received and reviewed the MvM Technologies Employee Handbook. I understand that I am responsible for following applicable company policies, procedures, and lawful instructions. I understand that this handbook is a general guide and does not replace my appointment letter, formal policy documents, or applicable law.
